Board of Directors' Message

A Message from our Board of Directors
NAPO Los Angeles
September 2013

Do you feel lucky to be a member of the NAPO-LA chapter?

I sure do. Let me count the reasons why:

* One of the five founders of NAPO attends our meetings regularly (yes, Ann Gambrell, I'm talking about you).

* You can turn on your TV and see our members exercising their craft (Sara Getzkin, "Hoarding: Buried Alive"; Dorothy Breininger, "Hoarders").

* We have members who are selling their own products (Dina Newman, Pockets 4 Pamphlets).

* If you're reading an article about organizing, it's likely that one of our members was quoted in it (Robyn Reynolds was quoted recently in a Huffington Post story about hoarding).

* Our members are published authors (Jodie Watson, "Purge with Passion: Organizing Principles from a Christian Perspective"; Regina Lark, "Psychic Debris, Crowded Closets: The Relationship between the Stuff in Your Head and What's Under Your Bed").

Our members are leaders in the industry and are working hard to push it forward.

The best part is that as members of NAPO-LA, we have the opportunity to rub elbows with them. While working on a job with another organizer, you might hear about how it was that she/he published her/his book. At our chapter picnic, you may be able to pick the brain of a veteran organizer about your business goals. Or just by volunteering in NAPO-LA, you may get a chance to help an organizer out in an episode of one of the TV shows (isn't that just soooo . . . LA?).

And possibly best of all, on any given month, you can win one hour with one of these vessels of knowledge through our chapter's Silent Auction - a priceless opportunity to question an organizer about how she does it all.

Membership in our chapter is not only an outlet for camaraderie, but for opportunities as well.

I may sound like a cheerleader, and that's because: A) I was a cheerleader (in high school, at least) and B) I believe in our chapter (I wouldn't be Vice President if I didn't). In the three years that I have been a member of our chapter, I have gotten immeasurable value.

As the end of our membership year approaches and emails about renewals are sent to your inbox, I hope you will remember all of these great reasons to continue being a part of our chapter.

Member Article: The Do's & Don't's of Wardrobe Storage & Preservation

The Do's and Don't's of Wardrobe Storage and Preservation

Doug Greenberg of Garde Robe

As a professional organizer, you may be asked to help a client store their off-season or infrequently worn clothes, shoes and accessories. But how do you prepare and store garments properly so your client's precious wardrobe remains in pristine condition? Here are some useful garment storage tips to keep in mind from experts at Garde Robe:

Avoid these common mistakes:

* To avoid distortion and stretching, never store vintage, embellished gowns, knits or delicate items on hangers; always store these items flat, wrapped individually in acid-free tissue, and place them in a breathable, archival box.

* Always remove the plastic garment bags from the dry cleaner immediately. These bags do not allow the garment to breathe properly, which leads to fume fading.

* Never put worn items back in the closet next to clean garments. Even if a worn garment is "clean," your body oils and perfume act as a magnet for material-damaging insects such as moths. Putting the worn garment back in the closet is an invitation, and these unwelcomed guests will create havoc and irreparable damage. Don't kid yourself that a few pieces of cedar and a lavender sachet will keep your closet free from insects indefinitely.

* Be aware that leather items (handbags, shoes and garments) absorb a lot of water and can take longer to dry completely. After cleaning, keep leather pieces outside the closet for a few days before placing them in the closet. Items placed in the closet too soon could cause mildew and contaminate the closet.

* Don't allow leather and denim items to come in contact with other items. Use breathable garment bags for hanging items, dust covers for handbags and individual boxes for footwear. Placing these items in the closet unprotected will lead to dye transferring.

* Don't overcrowd your closets. Proper air circulation is critical for preserving fabrics.

* If you choose to store infrequently worn or off-season garments in a guestroom closet to avoid overcrowding your closet, be sure to open the closet doors and leave a fan on in the room from time to time and when you go on vacation.

Never store garments in:

* Basements or attics where the temperature and humidity levels are inconsistent.

* Closets that have an outside wall (these closets tend to have higher relative humidity).

* Near a window with sunlight.

* Plastic or vinyl bags.

Ideal storage conditions for long-term preservation of textiles and fabrics are:
