President's Message

A Mighty BIG 'Thank You' to NAPO-LA Volunteers!

by Katherine Macey
Organize to Excel
and NAPO-LA President

Did you know that NAPO-LA is one of the four largest chapters of NAPO? The other large chapters are New England, New York and San Francisco. Each chapter's membership fluctuates between 110 and 150 members. One of the benefits of being part of such a large chapter is the opportunity to participate in activities that smaller chapters do not have the volunteer power to manifest. Working alongside other professional organizers allows us to learn from each other and to create relationships that may prove useful in our professional careers. Many organizers hire others to help out on larger jobs and when you have worked alongside someone in a volunteer capacity, you learn their strengths and capabilities, and their methods of working, making it easier to add them to your team, or be part of someone else's team in the future.

NAPO-LA hosts the Los Angeles Organizing Awards, this year incorporating the Gala Industry Exchange. You might already know that, but what you might not know is that, this year, nearly half our members volunteered in some capacity to help put the event on. This was an incredible achievement, not only from the point of view of the event itself, which was a huge success, but also from a volunteer standpoint. Words of thanks do not sufficiently acknowledge the effort that was put into the Awards by the volunteers involved, and I do thank them from the bottom of my heart. It is impossible to quantify the value of volunteering for the Awards. That all of the new incoming Board nominees were a part of the Awards Committee says something about the relationships and skills that were developed in the course of volunteering for the event.

We followed the Chapter volunteering with our Community Volunteer Project. A small group of volunteers braved the Friday afternoon traffic to volunteer at the LA Prom Closet where we measured, tagged and sorted dresses that will be given away to low income high school girls so they can attend their proms in style. LA Prom Closet not only gives away dresses, but also shoes, and accessories. On the day the girls pick up their prom clothes, workshops are given on a number of topics, including make-up, self-esteem and healthy living. The girls leave that day transformed both inside and out. It was great to know that NAPO-LA was able to contribute to such a worthy cause.

I can't write about these volunteer efforts without mentioning the countless hours many more (and some of the same) people contribute to running our Chapter day-to-day. From this newsletter, and all our communications with you via email and social media, to the running of the Professional Organizers Learning Academy (POLA), to general administration, to maintaining our history, to supporting our members, and the many other tasks involved in keeping our Chapter running, all the volunteers are appreciated and valued.

So how will you contribute to NAPO-LA this year?

Roxanne is without a doubt a NAPO-LA superstar member and we are honored to present her with a certificate of recognition as our January Volunteer of the Month.

What is your business name and website?

- My business is You Can Be Organized and can be found at youcanbeorganized.com

Where do you live and where do you do business?

- I live in Torrance and primarily do work in the So. Bay.

How many years have you been in business?

- I started my business in 2008, but I only work at it part time as I am still working a full time corporate job as a Customer Relationship Database Manager.

How did you get into organizing as a profession?

- In anticipation of early retirement from my corporate job I started exploring future opportunities that complimented my skills. During my research I came across information on NAPO and decided to attend the NAPO National Conference in Reno. From that point I knew this was to be my next career. So my goal has been to set up my business while I am working and have the money to invest, so when I retire next year I am good to go.

Where are you from originally?

- I was born in Burbank, Ca and grew up in the Sunland, Tujunga area and moved to the So. Bay in 1974.

What are your main organizing interests or specialties?

- I still consider myself new to the organizing field, so I have not explicitly defined my specialty. I have years of project management experience and office organization skills so the business aspect seems like a natural fit for me. But I also enjoy home organizing with some emphasis on decorating.

What do you like to do when you aren't organizing? Hobbies? Interests?

- Hobbies include off road motorcycle riding. This has been a family activity for 30 years. The entire family rides and we take several trips every year hauling the trailer and bikes out to California City where we set up camp and ride for a few days. I also enjoy scrapbooking, sewing, quilting and gardening.

Tell us about your family. Are you married, single, children, grandchildren?

- I am married with 2 grown married children and 3 lovely teenage granddaughters.

How did you come to join NAPO and/or NAPO-LA?

- When I decided to go to the Reno NAPO conference I joined NAPO and then sometime later contacted NAPO-LA and talked to Chantale Bordonaro who sold me on the value of the local organization. I also participate in the So. Bay NAPO group. It is so nice to have local members to talk with about what really goes on in this industry. It is a great opportunity to learn.

What has been your experience volunteering in NAPO-LA, and what do you see as the benefits of volunteering?

- Volunteering has been rewarding. I have learned so much as publisher of the newsletter. I now have a thorough working knowledge of Constant Contact. This particular position has been a nice way to be involved but still work at my pace as I have the time to spend, since I do work full time. And it has been a good way to stay on top of what's going in the organization.

THE POWER OF VULNERABILITY

I love all those TED Conference videos. The TED Conferences are these well, conferences where innovative, smart folks come and talk about what they have discovered and they video tape them and put them on the TED Conference site. The videos' catch phrases are: "Riveting talks by remarkable people. Ideas worth sharing." If you're not familiar, here's their site (careful, it's totally addictive). <http://www.ted.com>. Often times my friends send a link to me of a specific talk which has moved them or made them think. This is the last one I watched and it too had me thinking.

Brene Brown: The Power of Vulnerability. http://www.ted.com/talks/lang/eng/brene_brown_on_vulnerability.html

Now, Ms. Brown has spent years studying this subject of vulnerability and I in no way will be able to capture the magic and clarity of her speaking; so bear with me as I get through this bit of explanation. I think it's worth it.

Ms. Brown in her doctorate studies came to the point where she was studying people who had a strong sense of worthiness. (I think worthiness is worthy of some examination, don't you?!) In her studies, she found that these people who have a strong sense of worthiness experienced it because they had a strong sense of love and belonging. She came to call that strong sense of love and belonging - whole heartedness. In Brown's study of these people who live whole heartedly she saw they all demonstrated the courage to be imperfect and to fully embrace their vulnerability. To live whole heartedly, it was fundamental for them to embrace their vulnerability and imperfection.

Well, I'm sure you see where my head is going on this path of thinking. I mean, come on, we're professional organizers, we can often land in the world of perfectionism or more honestly, I can often land in the world of perfectionism. The "courage to be imperfect" can really set my heart racing - and not always in a good way. Through Ms. Brown's video, I realized that I often use my organizing and my organizational skills to keep myself from being vulnerable.

This is how I realized staying organized to avoid being vulnerable has worked. If I keep really organized than:

- * life's ups and downs just won't happen
- * I won't have to ask for help
- * I won't mismanage my money
- * I won't ever look stupid

Well, those are just the examples that come to mind. I am sure it could become a very long list for me.

Now, I am not in any way implying that if I am more disorganized, I will be living more whole heartedly or I'll have a stronger sense of worthiness. Yeah, I am not saying that. But I am willing to look at where I can bring some balance in my life so that I can cut myself some slack - or as the case may be - some vulnerability. I found Brene Brown's talk to be a wonderful jumping off point to ask myself, "Where do I use my organizing skills to keep me from risking vulnerability?"

Our clients are often very vulnerable when they call and ask for our services - our help. How do I stay in contact with my own vulnerability so I continue to have empathy and compassion for their courage to be "imperfect".

Ms. Brown also goes on to say, "What makes us vulnerable makes us beautiful." I have decided that I am going to choose to be a little more beautiful. It won't affect my bank account like botox but the cost to be a bit more vulnerable will allow my humanness to be more present to me, to my clients and well, to my world.

Does this sound familiar?

- You get a call from a VERY interested prospect, explain your services, your fees, and answer all the questions, but ... YOU DON'T BOOK THE APPOINTMENT!
- You continually get objections about your fees and don't really know how to effectively handle them, and ... YOU DON'T BOOK THE APPOINTMENT!
- Or the prospect says, "OK, I need to check with my husband, and I'll get back with you," and ... YOU DON'T BOOK THE APPOINTMENT!
- Your prospect is worried about spending money on your services during a down economy, and ... YOU DON'T BOOK THE APPOINTMENT!

What is this costing you in real lost revenue? Afraid of sounding sales-hypey on the phone and have no clue how to effortlessly "close" the appointment?

If you're ready to get outside your comfort zone and begin booking appointments, then this training session is for you. Just one or two tips will pay off for the rest of your organizing career. You'll learn exactly how to master ...

- The three most common objections, how to stop them dead in their tracks, and what NEVER to say to a prospect.
- Sounding professional without the sales-hype -- having them begging to work with you.
- Role playing with colleagues to break the comfort zone keeping your income in the tank.

Here's what past attendees said about Michelle's session:

"I received a phone call from a CPA who received a flier of mine. He asked about my fees, and with that first question I became Michelle's clone! I qualified him, felt his pain, praised him, told him about my four-hour minimum and hourly fee. We booked the first appointment to reorganize his home office. That one phone call more than paid for the workshop!" --Regina Lark, A Clear Path

"Michelle's workshop was simply great. She's an energetic, highly knowledgeable, humorous, and motivating speaker, and she got us very charged up about how to engage first-time callers in order to get to that first step, which is booking an appointment. Role-play was really fun (and very revealing!). Anyone who's interested in generating more business needs to take this workshop." --Susan Culligan, Got to Get Organized

Make more money and book your calendar with clients who WANT to work with you!

Michelle Quintana spent 12 years as a NAPO-LA member and full-time organizer. Now owner of Bulldog Creative Copywriting, she traded in the clutter for the keyboard, using what she learned in building a six-figure organizing business and turning that passion into a career as a professional freelance copywriter.
